PAOLO QUATTRONE

Paolo Quattrone is Professor of Accounting, Governance and Society at the Alliance Manchester Business School where he also leads the Centre for the Analysis of Investment Risk. Before joining AMBS he has held chairs at the University of Edinburgh Business School and IE Business School, Madrid and was Reader in Accounting at Saïd Business School, and Official Student (Fellow) of Christ Church. He is the co-Editor-in-Chief of Organization Studies.

A truly international scholar, he has conducted research and taught at the Universities of Catania, Kyoto, Madrid Carlos III, Manchester, Oxford, Palermo, Siena, Stanford and Luigi Bocconi of Milan. His research spans from the role of visualisations in decision making, strategising, and governance in ambiguous and uncertain environments to the emergence and diffusion of accounting and managerial practices in historical and contemporary settings. He is interested in how the visible and the invisible, absences, no-things, ambiguity, mystery and the unknowable affect decision making, organizing, reporting, and governance. He has also extensively researched the emergence of accounting and managerial practices in historical and contemporary settings.

As Fulbright New Century Scholar at the University of Stanford, he conducted research on changes in business models and education. Professor Quattrone also served on the standing Scientific Committee of the European Accounting Association for several years. He was a Member of the Advisory Group on the Future of Corporate Reporting at the Financial Reporting Council and currently chairs the Corporate Reporting Development Panel at AICPA-CIMA, where he also sits on the Thought Leadership and Ethics Committee. He teaches, consults, and researches in the area of Major Programme Management, where he is developing a series of impact case studies on reporting, governance and leadership practices to address issues of risk and uncertainty in complex organisations. He sits on the UK Infrastructure and Project Authority of the UK Cabinet and a member of the faculty of the Cabinet's Major Programme Leadership Academy. He is also an Associate Fellow at Saïd Business School, Oxford where he teaches on the MSc in Managing Major Programmes and various other Executive Education offerings including the Victorian Major Project Leadership Academy in Australia.
